

OUT ON COOL LONG ISLAND.

WHERE NEW YORKERS MAY FIND COMFORT AND AMUSEMENT.

Tachting, Fishing, and Bathing, and Pleasant Ocean Breezes at Long Beach, Bay Shore, and Other Resorts.

At Long Beach the waves scarcely deserve to be called "wild," but certainly do they disrupt themselves exceedingly do they dash even the most timid to their embrace. This beach is one of the best on the Atlantic coast, though it is open to the sea.

A new steamboat called Fisher's Island, to make two trips a day to Fire Island, connecting with the steamer from Bay Shore. The Yacht Club is preparing to contribute to the summer gayety by giving entertainments on the beach, and the Bay Shore Driving Club, recently organized, now numbers twenty-five members. The half-mile beach is open to all visitors, and is thrown open for the use of all visitors to the town. Hundreds of fishing boats and pleasure yachts, some sail, others motor, are expertly equipped, and are to be hired by the hour or day. The cottages at Bay Shore thus afford complete facilities for all kinds of sports. The demand for houses has been in excess of all forms of record, and there is scarcely any unoccupied dwelling in the place.

The beach of Chatham, Long Island, might be called the hamptons of Bay Shore, and near by that of Mr. H. M. Nichols, who has built a large house laid out and beautifully shaded lawns which surround it. Other cottages are Jules Haynes, Robert A. Tinkham, Irving L. Fisher, H. L. Dyer, George G. Green, F. K. Hurd, Mervin Hecht, Charles Mapes, Louis Monia, A. E. Willard, G. Van Vleet, A. W. Nichols, and many others.

The beach of East Hampton, the hotel is only half built, with the prospect of a crowded house by the middle of the month, and the cottages are all rented, the greatest portion of the leases having taken possession.

They are Edwin Cottrell and family, Mrs. Nathan Chandler, E. A. Beach and family, F. L. Hobnail, H. Southwick, John Lambeir, E. C. Curtis, C. H. Smithers, John Mason, John Smithers, Wm. Barre, W. D. Murph, S. W. Richardson, J. C. Clayton, C. N. Shipper, W. Day, and J. Henry Work of New York.

Every modern improvement is found at the Long Beach Hotel, including hot and cold salt water private baths, with a skilled masseuse operator in constant attendance. There is orchestra music twice daily, and the big ballroom with its splendid floor is popular for an evening in the grand style of the world. The dining room is comparatively new and contains every modern improvement. Registered here is J. J. Burchell and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Smith of Brooklyn, ex-senator Dunham and family, Alfred Storms, A. G. Woodruff, W. H. Roistone, John L. Connelly, Governor Morris and family, L. E. Connelly, Antonia and family, all of New York.

The Linwood Hotel, although small, is a favorite among all. The hotel is open to the sea, and can care of seventy-five guests, and there is not an unappropriated room in the house. The location is close to the water, and the view from the rooms is excellent.

The Hotel is a new building, and the cottages are all rented, the greatest portion of the leases having taken possession. They are Edwin Cottrell and family, Mrs. Nathan Chandler, E. A. Beach and family, F. L. Hobnail, H. Southwick, John Lambeir, E. C. Curtis, C. H. Smithers, John Mason, John Smithers, Wm. Barre, W. D. Murph, S. W. Richardson, J. C. Clayton, C. N. Shipper, W. Day, and J. Henry Work of New York.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.

Among the guests at the hotel are W. Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman, P. W. Harding, R. N. Speer, O. E. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson, C. H. W. Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Argueau, Philip Parplank, Darwin Miserole, and Wm. W. Carothers of Brooklyn; George Corliss, Orange, Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patten, Thomas Cousins, and J. C. Lockwood, New York.

The Deming House, Five Villas, and the buildings thereon, kept by Capt. R. J. Howell and L. Miles are already well filled with guests and expect a long and prosperous season. The hotel and grounds are the depot and will entertain transients.

PATCHOGUE.

Leaving Bay Shore and still following the bay you come to the thriving village of Patchogue, a small town of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the congenitally lancing waves at Patchogue seem to have a rhythm all their own and very soothing to the ear, and over the great beach at this point offers the same advantages of sea fishing, and bathing as at the others mentioned, and here again you have the opportunity to convey passengers across to the ocean.

The yacht station is conveniently located on the promenade, and the plazas can be secured by those seeking seclusion and rest.